The silhouettes on these pages are representative of the great characters who have gone from our college. Because they maintained an unyielding determination until success was theirs, they have won our admiration and esteem. It is from such personalities as these that we, as students, receive inspiration for nobler ideals and greater achievements. Since they did not forget the worthwhile principles of life inculcated in their character while students on our campus, these alumni have forced higher institutions to recognize and respect our position in the educational world; thus it is our desire to express our gratitude to them for the honor and distinction they have brought our college.

FOREWORD

"Nothing now is left but a majestic memory." So may it be said some years hence of Mars Hill College days. It is in this belief that the staff submits THE LAUREL.

Interwoven with our local activities is a theme of national modern achievements, portrayed not solely by words but by great personalities in each field of progress. It is our hope that such characters will stimulate thought for possible later achievements.

If this book in some future time, despite its obvious shortcomings, kindles in the heart of one classmate some fond memory of Mars Hill in 1932; if it reflects the friendships and joys of college life; if it uplifts the soul by sweet recollections and inspires some noble feeling, it will have served its purpose.

ALMA MATER

A. R. WHITEHURST

NONA MOORE ROBERTS

Thine to mold us Al-ma Ma-ter in the beau-ty of thy grace,
 Thou the mistress of our ser-vice to our race.
 Thou hast sown thy golden seedlings on our rude uncultured soil:
 Let the morn of our a-wak-ing be blest with toil.

From the clustered rhododendron
 Doth thy living fountain flow,
 'Til our fields are full of blossoms;
 And the glow
 Of the sunrise o'er thy mountains
 Paints the world a jeweled plain,
 Where thy grateful sons and daughters
 Hold domain.

When our grain is ripe to harvest
 And the cooling dews descend
 On thy weary happy reapers
 At the end—
 We salute thee, Alma Mater;
 At thine altar may we sing,
 And our efforts thru the years thy Tribute bring.

COLLEGE

NICHOLAS M. BUTLER

"We observe the revolution which brought communism to Russia and find that schools flourish under new regimes as major instruments of social control. We observe the dictatorship of Italy, and we note once more that education is the instrument used by the dictator to guide youth into the new ways approved for national life. We see the ancient civilizations of western Europe, crippled by war and disrupted by economic stress and storm, open new schools for the common people, looking to the future for happier times when educated democracies shall be able to cope with the problems of organized society . . . The impulse which stimulates man to seek new bodies of knowledge originates in modern civilization itself. Knowledge grows in response to the demands of life. Every development of modern life has compelled the curriculum of the school to expand."

WE HAVE NOT FINISHED

Come, my fellows, College Students, comrades of the midnight oil,
You who seek for truth and knowledge, nor have wearied with the toil.

Is there one so dull among us who believes his task is done?
Let him change his foolish notion: hardly is our work begun.

Are there fires of error burning where the sober truth should burn?
One who thinks that he has finished learning, with no more to learn?

We are only babes in knowledge, looking out with glad surprise
On the world of things about us with a wonder in our eyes.

We have had enough of learning but to teach our vagrant heart
That in all the vast world 'round us every man must have his part.

Let us then refresh our vision and our manhood strength renew,
For the world awaits our coming with a million tasks to do.

In the ranks of men and women there is many a place to fill,
Where the bravest hearts have fallen and the leader's voice is still.

Comrades, we are not the rabble, nor the high-brow, nor the low,
But the world is calling leaders, and we hear the call, and go.

We are human men and women, we are humble with the rest,
We will stoop to lift the lowest, but will rise to touch the Best.

Sordid aims and circumstances shall not chain us in the dust—
We are free, and Freedom's children: let us glorify the trust.

Does the earth not have her purpose in the margin of the sun?
We are greater than the earth: and shall we not our courses run?

We are living for a purpose,—obvious is the cause to see—
For the glory of our Maker, brother, and humanity.

There are wrongs that must be righted, there's a righteous cause to plead,
There are human needs that call us: we must rise to fill the need.

O our nation, O our homeland, dearest Island of the sea!
It is ours to mold your future, and to guide your destiny.

O our brothers of the nations, men of war, and men of peace,
All our fates are linked together in the problems of the race!

We shall dream, and we shall labor, we shall build our common lot,
Till the fangs of war are broken and our hatreds are forgot.

We shall build us nobler nations, with our brothers o'er the sea,
On the principles of Christ, and faith in all humanity.

* * * * *

Come, my brothers, College Students,— what is this I see and hear?
'Tis the hallowed Good-bye hour, with the hand-clasp and the tear.

Good-bye, then, I'll see you yonder: one another we shall find
In the fullness of the years, and in the service of mankind.

ROSSER BERRY

With grateful and loving hearts we pay this last tribute to Rosser Berry, one of our classmates who, in his quiet and simple way, stamped a lasting impression on all who knew him. Although his contact with us was brief, memories of his unostentatious strength of character will remain with us through the years as an inspiration.

B. S. U.

GEORGE W. TRUETT

Such an enlargement of the idea of God to meet the needs of this world is of the innermost demands of religion today. When a man believes in the living God as the creative power in this universe, whose character was revealed in Christ and who, recognized or unrecognized, reveals himself in every form of goodness, truth, and beauty which life anywhere contains, he has achieved a God adequate for life. To such a man the modern progressive outlook upon the world becomes exhilarating; all real advance is a revelation of the purpose of this living God, and, far from being hostile to religion, our modern categories furnish the noblest mental formulae in which the religious spirit ever had opportunity to find expression.

"In a world which out of lowly beginnings has climbed as far and seems intended to go on to heights unimagined, God is our hope and in His name we will set up our banners."

HARRY EMERSON.

THE BAPTIST STUDENT UNION

Life is a continuous search for truth. Some in the course of the quest go off at a tangent, and it is hard for them to regain the way. There are many who falter and who realize the need for guidance. In striving to gain a greater vision of truth one attains a little nearer to the likeness of Him who is Truth. All of the influences for good that can be thrown about one aid in the quest.

The B. S. U., composed of all the religious organizations on the campus, has sought through the years to help students in the search for truth to place about them influences that will count for good throughout life. Every student who is a member of any religious organization is a member of the B. S. U. and should feel the responsibility of helping to make influences for good felt in college life.

The B. S. U. Council, as the executive head of this work, is composed of the leaders in the different phases of religious life. They plan, direct and stimulate the various activities. This group has the privilege and opportunity of making life more abundant by serving others and leading them in the paths of service.

In the preparation of the Handbook which is placed in the hands of all the students at the opening of school, and in enlisting all in the organizations for Bible study and training for service, its officers have made for the B. S. U. a large place in the life of the Institution.

The B. S. U. Council hope and offer fervent prayers that this great force and influence for good, which has been manifested through the years on the Mars Hill College campus and has helped to make Christ a dynamic force in the lives of many who have gone out from this Institution to bless the world, will continue through the years to place about the students influences and forces that will help them in the search for the higher and more noble things in life.

FAVORITES

HELEN KELLER

Friendship is an education. It draws the friend out of himself and all that is selfish and ignoble in him and leads him to life's higher levels of altruism and sacrifice. Many a man has been saved from a life of frivolity and emptiness to a career of noble service by finding at a critical hour the right kind of a friend.

"George Mims, young man, you should think of the future."
George: "But today's Pearl's birthday, so I have to think of the present."

"Say, how much would a tennis racket cost me, Mr. Whitaker?"
"Do you want a steel one, Conway?"
"Well, I dunno, I might get caught at it."

Andy: "I'm offering a prize to the laziest man in college, and I think you will win it."
Dud: "All right, roll me over and put it in my back pocket."

"'Buddy,' who made the first nitride?"
"Paul Revere, Mr. Wood."

Ruby: "Look, Madge, doesn't that man on the corner have a large society pin!"
Madge: "Shut up, Ruby, he's a policeman."

Mr. McLeod: "Mr. Mashburn, name eleven of Shakespeare's plays."
"Ten Nights in a Barroom,' and 'The Merchant of Venice.'"

"I just thought of a good joke."
Nevely: "Aw! Get your mind off yourself, Bruce."

Miss Wager: "I don't know, it's round."

ORGANIZATIONS

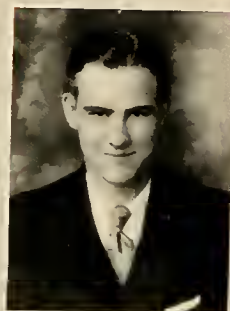

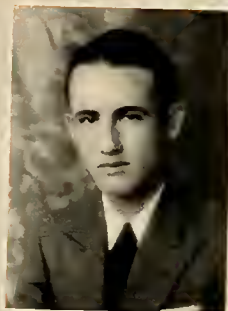

SILAS H. STRAWN

"The views of our organizations wield their influence in shaping public policies intimately affecting both public and business because they are not the views of the few but of the many, projected upon the background of public interest. Our organization objectives, moreover, are never inconsequential, but are always those dominant concerns that are to the fore in their effect on the welfare of our communities and our business and industrial enterprises. These concerns and these issues in an intimate and far-reaching degree affect the welfare of every citizen in the land, to chart a proper course for our organizations is thus a challenge to the best efforts of every one of us."

MARS HILL LITERARY SOCIETIES

While Mars Hill was yet a new institution, there were formed, on the campus, organizations known as Literary Societies. These societies have remained since that time distinct organizations which are almost sacred to those who are privileged to call themselves members. This incomparable privilege is given to all students, whether academy or college, and is taken advantage of by almost every one.

It is through the societies that many friendships are formed which remain constant during the whole of a lifetime. Without such organizations, the characters of many students would never be fully revealed, thus permitting them to know and be known.

In the programs which are presented weekly, student talent is discovered and developed. The work of the girls' societies—the Nonpareil and Clio—centers around music and the other finer arts, combined with reading, debating, and original literary work. That of the boys—the Euthalian and Philomathian—emphasizes oratory, declaiming, and debating. Every student is given an individual training in every phase.

The most exciting time of the school year to a society member is that time when his society representatives meet in public those of the opposite society. This event occurs twice each year. At Anniversary time it is the ambition of each society to excel the others on the campus. Again at Commencement this same spirit of competition is evinced in the oratorical, debating, declamation, reading, and essay contests. This friendly rivalry tends to add zest and enthusiasm, rather than animosity, to society endeavors.

Mars Hill societies exert a great influence on their members. Each person remains on his guard at all times, to do nothing which would in any way break down the ideals of character maintained by his society. As a result, from our college and from our societies have gone many students who, because of the inspiration and training received in these organizations, have made an eminent success in life. Many outstanding orators, statesmen, lawyers, preachers, and people of great literary value date the beginning of their success to the ambition and inspiration received from one of the four literary societies of Mars Hill College.

SPORTS

CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

Pastimes, out-of-door sports, and systematic gymnastics are the forms of exercise which yield the best of results in the physical training of children and college students. . . . They conduce to bodily growth and improvement, and their moral effects upon our modern civilization are of value, since they call for self-subordination, develop public spirit and co-operative effort, and serve to reveal and train the dominant characteristics and tendencies as regards temper, disposition, and force of will of those who engage in them.

SPORTS AT MARS HILL

Athletics at Mars Hill College are under the supervision of O. E. Roberts, coach of varsity sports and director of intramural activities. Mars Hill now offers five varsity sports for men: football, basketball, baseball, tennis, and track—track becoming a varsity sport only in the past year. To those making a letter in a varsity sport, athletic certificates are given. The "M" Club, composed of the varsity letter-men, is maintained for the betterment of the athletics, holding regular weekly meetings, and giving a banquet in the spring.

In intramural athletics Mars Hill holds a position that is unique among the junior colleges of the South. During the course of the year, some seven intramural sports are offered to the men: basketball, tennis, track, baseball, golf, indoor hockey, and gymn. For the young women the following sports are available: gym, basketball, tennis, playground ball, volley ball, hiking, archery, and indoor hockey. In order to receive credits in scholastic work, each student must earn a minimum of six points in either varsity or intramural sports. To those earning ten points, athletic certificates will be awarded. Each varsity sport is valued at four points, while each intramural sport is good for two points, except gym, which counts six points if taken throughout the year.

Mars Hill has good facilities for athletics, but more improvements are being added each year. Basketball and all indoor sports are held in the McConnell Gymnasium, which has practically a full retinue of gymnasium equipment. On the varsity athletic field the football, baseball, and track contests are held. Another athletic field for intramural sports is maintained, affording the same accommodations as the varsity field. At present, Mars Hill has seven tennis courts. Near the boys' dormitories lies a nine-hole golf course in the process of construction, and already affording followers of this sport a limited layout for play.

In the next year or so Mars Hill hopes to make marked advancement in its athletic facilities. A proposition for a swimming pool, to be constructed in the basement of the McConnell Gymnasium, has materialized to the extent that half the amount needed for its completion has already been raised by the students. It is expected that the pool will be ready for use by the fall term of 1932. In addition to the completion of the nine-hole golf course during the summer, several more tennis courts are also in the stages of construction. Some new sports are expected to be added to the fast increasing athletic schedule for next year. Chief among them is boxing, in which there has been manifested much interest of late, several students being quite adept at this popular pastime. When the golf course is completed, a varsity golf team will be organized. Added to these will be several minor sports, giving Mars Hill as complete an athletic program as any to be found among the junior colleges of the country.

ADVERTISEMENTS

WILL ROGERS

"Advertising has been a mighty force in the advance of civilization. It has helped people to wear better clothes, build better homes, eat a more wholesome variety of food, drive better automobiles, engage in wholesome travel, and take an interest in public affairs on a scale hitherto unknown. Advertising has also developed a truly marvelous co-ordination of the arts which play upon the human mind. All the resources which commercial advertising has developed in the perfection of the graphic arts, all the knowledge of advertising psychology, awaits the hand of the interpreter who may turn it to broader uses of social advance."

JOY ELMER MORGAN.

The silhouettes on these pages are representative of the great characters who have gone from our college. Because they maintained an unyielding determination until success was theirs, they have won our admiration and esteem. It is from such personalities as these that we, as students, receive inspiration for nobler ideals and greater achievements. Since they did not forget the worthwhile principles of life inculcated in their character while students on our campus, these alumni have forced higher institutions to recognize and respect our position in the educational world; thus it is our desire to express our gratitude to them for the honor and distinction they have brought our college.
